More Reasons to become a member:

It means the world....

to children in Placer and surrounding counties:

- Delivering hands-on science directly to students at their schools and youth groups.
- Offering place-based learning at our 60 acre environmental education campus where students learn science, engage nature and work cooperatively.
- Providing online resources and activities for teachers and children of all ages - both in the classroom and out.

It means the world....

to teachers:

- Giving educators access to experienced teachers/mentors for support, resources, and encouragement - both locally and online.
- Promoting science literacy through meetings, workshops, thematic programs and online resources.
- Delivering in-depth instruction on techniques for nurturing children's natural curiosity and innate sense of wonder in an outdoor classroom.

It means the world....

to families throughout the region:

- Teaching classes, workshops, and outings for families who want to have fun, learn and explore together.
- Showing parents, guardians and caregivers how to engage a child's natural curiosity for nature.
- Providing family-friendly resources, including award-winning interpretive education and investigative activities.

It means the world....

to learners in our whole community:

- Encouraging people to discover cutting-edge research on the earth's environmental health and history.
- Hosting renowned scientists for local lectures and programs.
- Helping neighbors understand that they have an ecological connection as well as a social one.
- Creating opportunities for local youth and adult volunteers to "be the change they want to see".
